CIS 4389
Directed Readings In Information Systems

Prerequisites: With the consent of instructor, and others depending on the topic; open to CIS majors only.

Catalog Description:

This course addresses emerging and advanced topics in information technology. The specific topic will vary from semester to semester, as will associated course prerequisites. The student is advised to check with the department on this offering. This course is repeatable for different topics.

Students must apply to take CIS 4389. An application form and a proposal must be developed and approved. The student is responsible for finding a member of the faculty to direct the reading

1. Link to application form.

2. Link to proposal samples*: [sample proposal1] and [sample proposal2].

*These are CIS 8389 samples, however the content is the same for CIS 4389.