CIS 8399:
Topics in Information Systems Development

Prerequisites:

Core course sequence and others depending on topic

Catalog Description:

This course addresses emerging or advanced topics in the development of information system applications such as socio-technical or soft-system methods, methodology engineering, or workflow system design. The specific topic may vary from semester to semester, as may the associated course prerequisites. The student is advised to check with the department or his/her faculty advisor on this offering. This course is repeatable for different topic